Movie rating Recommendation system

Business Understanding

In the modern entertainment industry, consumers are overwhelmed by vast libraries of movies across streaming platforms, theaters, and rental services. With thousands of titles available, finding relevant and engaging content can be challenging.

The goal is to provide movie recommendations to users based on their past ratings, improvin user engagement and satisfactions. Additionally, I will aim to address the cold start problem to recommend movies for new users or movies with limited data.

Data Understanding

The MovieLens dataset is used, which contains 100K,836 explicit user ratings for movies along with metdata such as 9,743 titles, genres, and timestamps. Users were selected at random for inclusion. This dataset allows us to analyze user preferences and create a recommendation system.This dataset is particularly suitable for this project because:

- It contains explicit user feedback in the form of ratings, making it ideal for collaborative filtering approaches.
- It provides metadata about movies (e.g., genres, titles, release years), enabling the potential inclusion of content-based and hybrid recommendation techniques.
- It has been extensively used in academic and industry research, ensuring reliability and well-documented best practices.

In this project, we have 3 seperate datasets that can be included

- links.csv: Identifiers that can be used to link to other sources of movie data are contained in the file.
- movies.csv: Provides metadata such as movie titles and genres.
- ratings.csv: Contains user-movie interactions with explicit ratings.

While the dataset is highly useful, several limitations must be considered:

- Sparsity: The dataset contains a high number of missing ratings, making it challenging to infer preferences for less active users. Techniques such as matrix factorization and nearest-neighbor models can mitigate this issue.
- Cold Start Problem:
- New users: Without sufficient rating history, it is difficult to provide personalized recommendations. Hybrid models incorporating content-based methods can help.
- New movies: Unrated movies struggle to be recommended until they accumulate sufficient feedback.
- Bias in Ratings: Some movies receive significantly more ratings than others, potentially skewing recommendations. Users may have varying rating scales (e.g., some users rarely give 5-star ratings). Normalization techniques can address this.

Data Preparartion

I'll start by inspecting the contents of these files to understand their structure and proceed with building the movie recommendation system.

I'll import the necessary libraries for this project, which includes the Surprise library.

In [1]:

```python
#import neccesary libraries

import numpy as np
```

```python
import pandas as pd
import matplotlib.pyplot as plt import seaborn as sns %matplotlib inline

#import neccessary libraries from the surprise library
from surprise import SVD, Dataset, Reader from surprise.model_selection import train_test_split from surprise import accuracy from surprise.model_selection import cross_validate, GridSearchCV from surprise.prediction_algorithms import KNNBaseline, KNNBasic, KNNWithMeans from sklearn.feature_extraction.text import TfidfVectorizer from sklearn.metrics.pairwise import cosine_similarity from sklearn.metrics import mean_squared_error

In [2]:

```python
save each CSV file into variables.

links_df = pd.read_csv('../data/links.csv') movies_df = pd.read_csv('../data/movies.csv') ratings_df = pd.read_csv('../data/ratings.csv')
```

In [3]:

```python
print the head of each dataset

links_df_head = links_df.head() movies_df_head = movies_df.head() ratings_df_head = ratings_df.head()

links_df_head, movies_df_head, ratings_df_head
```

 4       1       50     5.0  964982931)

Here is the structure of the three datasets:

1. Links Dataset (links.csv):
    * movieId: A unique identifier for each movie (linked to the movies.csv dataset).
    * imdbId: The IMDb ID for the movie.
    * tmdbId: The TMDb ID for the movie.

2. Movies Dataset (movies.csv):

* movieId: A unique identifier for each movie (linked to the ratings.csv and l inks.csv datasets).
    * title: The title of the movie, including the release year.
    * genres: The genres associated with the movie (separated by "|").

  3.Ratings Dataset (ratings.csv):

    * userId: A unique identifier for each user.
    * movieId: A unique identifier for the movie (linked to the movies.csv dataset
).
    * rating: The rating given by the user (on a scale, e.g., 1 to 5).
    * timestamp: The timestamp of when the rating was given.

EDA

I'll focus on the following for EDA:

  1. Missing Values: Check for null or missing values in each dataset.

  2. Distribution of Ratings: Analyze the distribution of ratings to understand user behavior.

  3. Movie Statistics: Identify the most-rated and least-rated movies.

  4. User Statistics: Understand user activity (e.g., number of movies rated per use r).

  5. Genre Analysis: Explore the genres of movies to see the diversity in the dataset

In [4]:

```
Check for missing values in each dataset

missing_links = links_df.isnull().sum() missing_movies = movies_df.isnull().sum() missing_ratings = ratings_df.isnull().sum()

missing_links, missing_movies, missing_ratings

Out[4]:

(movieId    0
 imdbId     0
 tmdbId     8
 dtype: int64,
 movieId    0
 title      0
 genres     0
 dtype: int64,
 userId      0
 movieId     0
 rating      0 timestamp   0 dtype: int64)

We see the missing values in the following tmdbId: 8 missing values.

We can drop these values since it's a small portion of missing values throughout the data

In [5]:

links_df.dropna(subset=['tmdbId'], inplace=True)

Visualizations

I'll start with a visualization of the ratings and the amount of ratings recorded.

In [6]:

Plot the distribution of ratings
plt.figure(figsize=(8, 6))
sns.histplot(ratings_df['rating'], bins=10, kde=False, color='blue') plt.title('Distribution of Ratings', fontsize=16)
plt.xlabel('Rating', fontsize=12)
plt.ylabel('Frequency', fontsize=12)
plt.grid(axis='y', linestyle='--', alpha=0.7)
plt.savefig('./images/Distribution_of_ratings.png')
plt.show()

The distribution of ratings shows clear peaks at rounded values (e.g., 3.0, 4.0, 5.0), suggesting users prefer whole-number ratings. The majority of ratings seem to lean towards higher values, indicating that users may tend to rate movies positively.

Next, we'll identify the most and least rated movies.

In [7]:

```
Movie statistics: Number of ratings per movie
movie_rating_counts = ratings_df['movieId'].value_counts()
```

most_rated_movies = movie_rating_counts.head(5)
least_rated_movies = movie_rating_counts.tail(5)

Merge with movies_df to get movie titles for the most/least-rated movies
most_rated_movies_df = movies_df[movies_df['movieId'].isin(most_rated_movies.index)] most_rated_movies_df = most_rated_movies_df.set_index('movieId').loc[most_rated_movies.in dex]
most_rated_movies_df['rating_count'] = most_rated_movies.values

#Least-rated movies
least_rated_movies_df = movies_df[movies_df['movieId'].isin(least_rated_movies.index)] least_rated_movies_df = least_rated_movies_df.set_index('movieId').loc[least_rated_movies
.index]
least_rated_movies_df['rating_count'] = least_rated_movies.values

print('Most Rated Movies:') print(most_rated_movies_df)

print('\n Least Rated Movies:')
print(least_rated_movies_df)

```
Most Rated Movies:

Let's visualize the Top 5 Most rated Movies

In [8]:

Plot most-rated movies
plt.figure(figsize=(10, 6))
plt.barh(most_rated_movies_df['title'], most_rated_movies_df['rating_count'], color='skyb lue')
plt.title('Top 5 Most-Rated Movies', fontsize=16)
plt.xlabel('Number of Ratings', fontsize=12)
plt.ylabel('Movie Title', fontsize=12)
plt.gca().invert_yaxis()  # Invert y-axis to have the most-rated movie on top plt.grid(axis='x', linestyle='--', alpha=0.7)
plt.savefig('./images/Top_5_most_rated_movies.png')
plt.show()
```
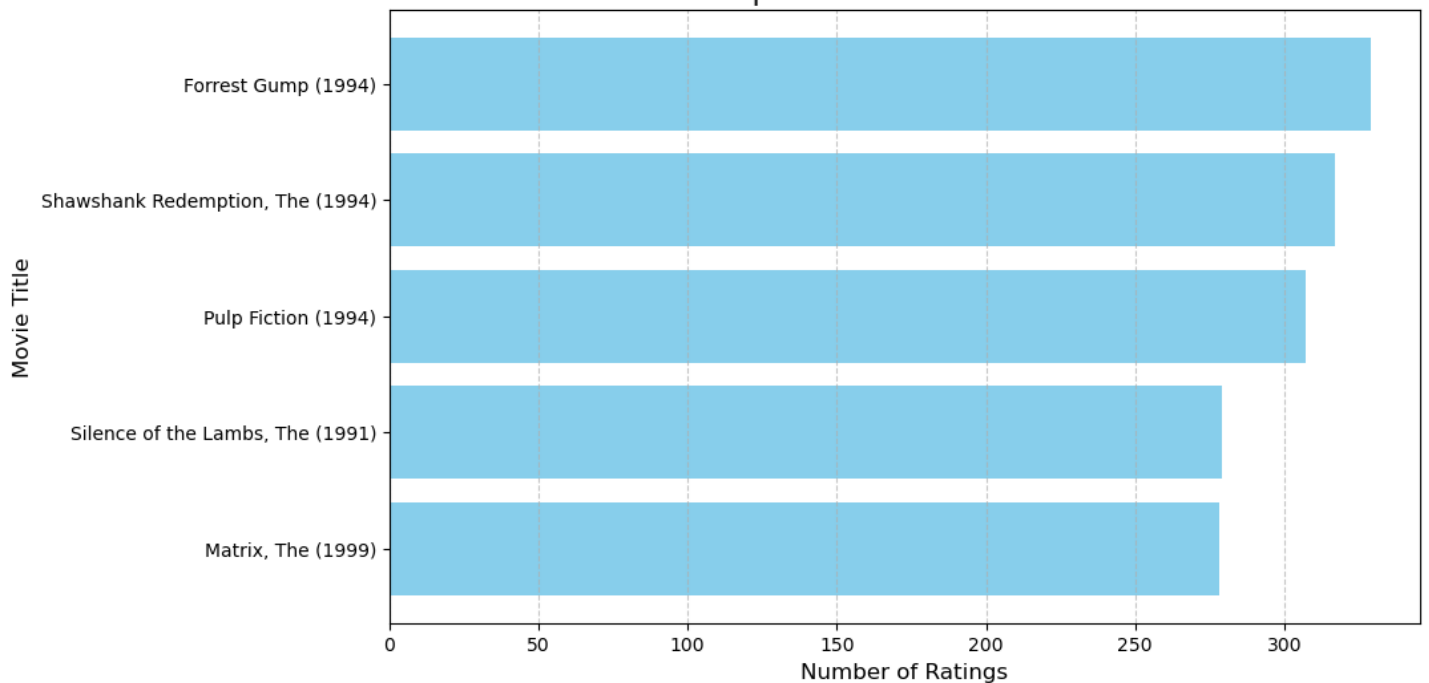

We can see that the top reported rated movie was Forrest Gump, followed by Shawshank Redemption, Pulp Fiction, Silence of the Lambs, and Matrix. This will help identify user preferences and which movies are most widely rated.

Let's do the same with the 5 least rated movies

In [9]:

```python
Plot least-rated movies
plt.figure(figsize=(10, 6))
plt.barh(least_rated_movies_df['title'], least_rated_movies_df['rating_count'], color='salmon') plt.title('Top 5 Least-Rated Movies', fontsize=16)
plt.xlabel('Number of Ratings', fontsize=12)
plt.ylabel('Movie Title', fontsize=12)
plt.gca().invert_yaxis()  # Invert y-axis to have the least-rated movie on top
plt.grid(axis='x', linestyle='--', alpha=0.7)
plt.savefig('./images/Top_5_least_rated_movies.png')
plt.show()

Movie popularity

Popular movies (those rated by many users) tend to be older or critically acclaimed. Most movies have very few ratings, making recommendations challenging for niche movies.

```python
movie_ratings_count = ratings_df.groupby('movieId')['rating'].count()
plt.figure(figsize=(10, 6)) sns.histplot(movie_ratings_count, bins=30, kde=False, color='orange') plt.title('Number of Ratings per Movie') plt.xlabel('Number of Ratings')
plt.ylabel('Count of Movies')
plt.show()
```

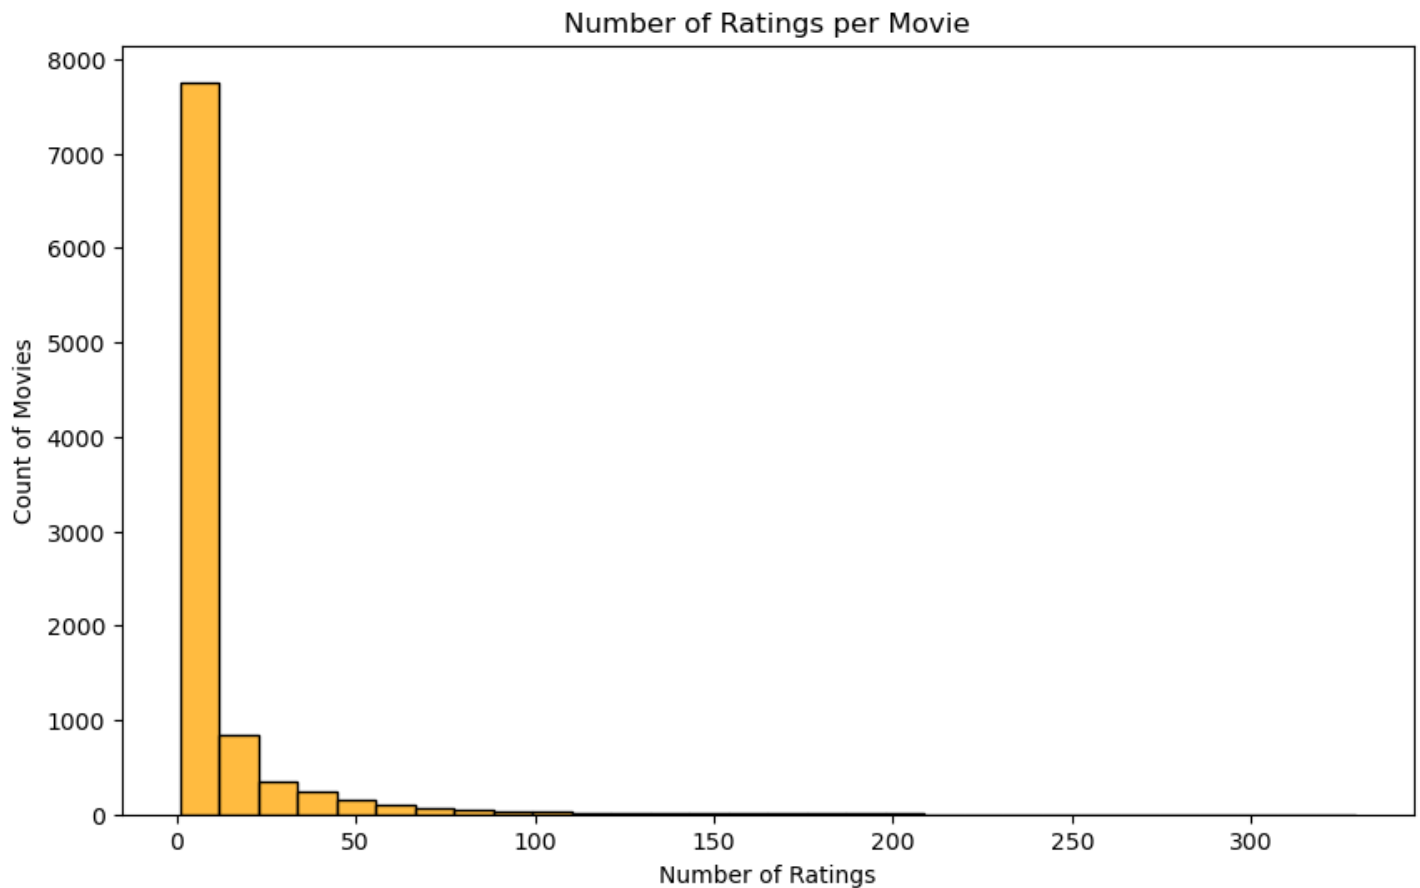

Genre Distribution

Movies are grouped by genres to understand the dominant categories. Popular genres include Drama, Comedy, and Action.

Movies often belong to multiple genres.

```python
from collections import Counter
genre_list = movies_df['genres'].str.split('|').explode()
genre_counts = Counter(genre_list)

plt.figure(figsize=(12, 6))
sns.barplot(x=list(genre_counts.keys()), y=list(genre_counts.values()), color='purple') plt.title('Genre Distribution')
plt.xlabel('Genres')
plt.ylabel('Count')
plt.xticks(rotation=45)
plt.savefig('./images/Genre_distribution.png')
plt.show()
```
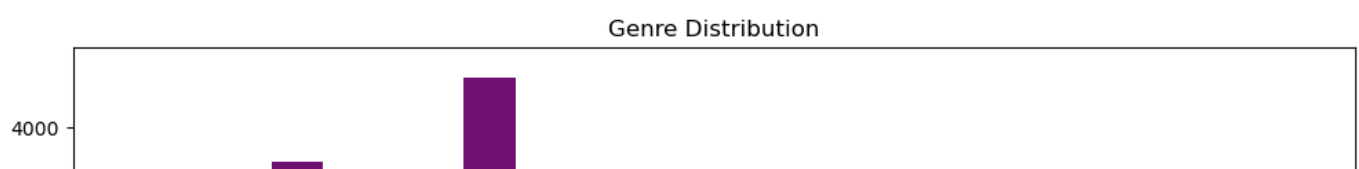

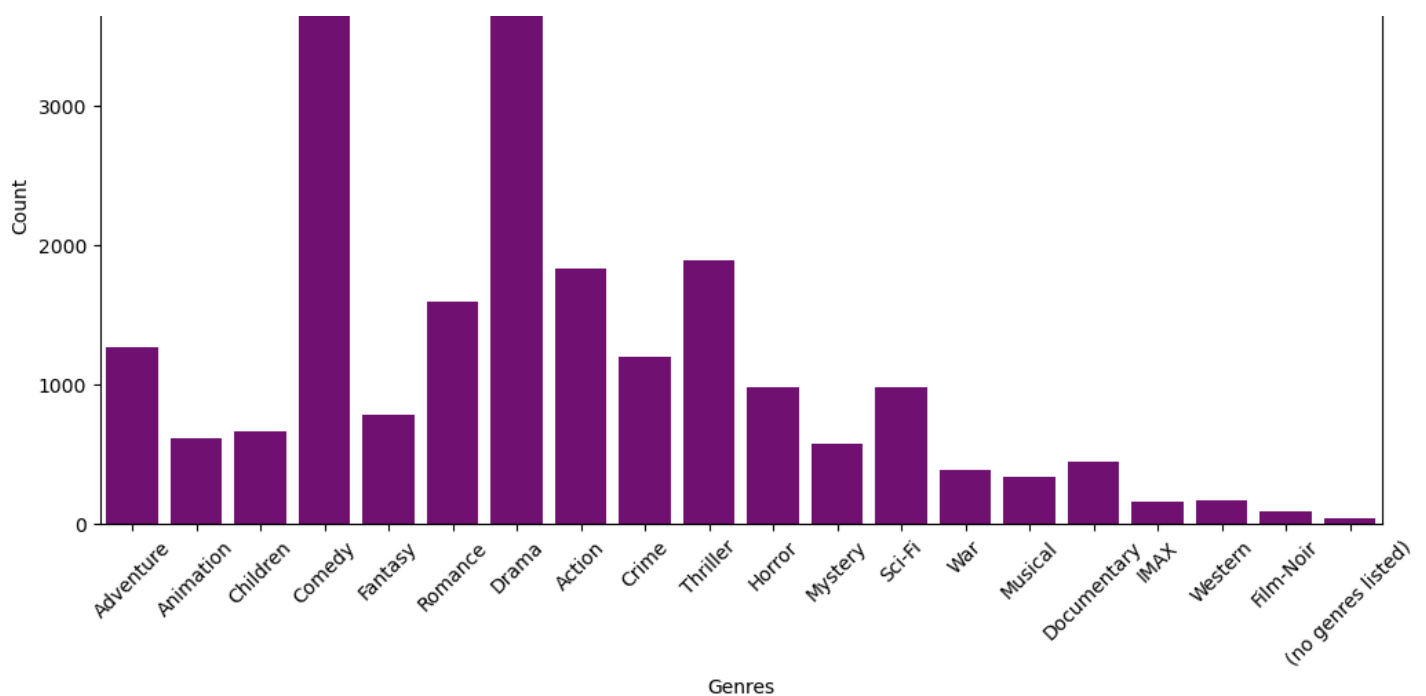

Just like above, we can see the least rated recorded movies. This will provide insight into what movies users consider be least entertaining.

Explore User Statistics

Next lets focus on the Most and Least active users based on how many ratings they have provided.

In [12]:

```python
Count the number of ratings per user
user_rating_counts = ratings_df['userId'].value_counts()

Get the most active users
most_active_users = user_rating_counts.head()

Get the least active users
least_active_users = user_rating_counts.tail()

#print results
print('Most Active Users:\n')
print(most_active_users)

print('\n Least Active Users:')
print(least_rated_movies_df)

Most Active Users:

userId
414    2698
599    2478
474    2108
448    1864

Name: count, dtype: int64

 Least Active Users:
                                                    title            genres  \
movieId
86279                             Into Eternity (2010)       Documentary 86922    Nothing to Declare (Rien à déclarer) (2010)           Comedy
5962                         Body of Evidence (1993)    Drama|Thriller
87660                           Too Big to Fail (2011)             Drama 163981                                    31 (2016)            Horror

         rating_count

```
86279             1
86922             1
5962              1
87660             1
163981            1

The most active users have rated a large number of movies, likely representing the highly engagaed users. Their ratings can provide valuable insights for collaborative filtering or building recommendation systems.

The least active users have contributed very few ratings, this may pose challenges for our recommendation systems due to the lack of data (the cold start problem)

Let's continue by creating a Collaborative Filtering-based Recommendation System.

I'll preprocess the data doing the following:

- Create a user-item matrix where rows represent users, columns represent movies, and cells contain ratings.
- Normalize ratings (optional, depending on the algorithm used).
- Handle sparsity (e.g., fill missing values with 0 or leave as NaN, depending on the algorithm).

In [13]:

```python
create a user-item matrix
user_item_matrix =  ratings_df.pivot_table(index='userId', columns='movieId', values='ra ting')

Display the matrix
print(user_item_matrix.head())
```

```
movieId  1        2        3        4        5        6        7        8        \
userId

2        NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN
3        NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN
4        NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN
5        4.0      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN      NaN

4        NaN      NaN      ...  NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN
5        NaN      NaN      ...  NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN

movieId  193583  193585  193587  193609

5        NaN     NaN     NaN     NaN

[5 rows x 9724 columns]

The user-item generated matrix is sparse. Let's attempt to handle this sparsity and building the recommendation model.

Since the user-item matrix contains NaN value for unrated movies, let's factorize the user-item matrix to uncover latent features

In [14]:

```python
prepare the dataset for Surprise
reader = Reader(rating_scale=(0.5,5))
data = Dataset.load_from_df(ratings_df[['userId', 'movieId', 'rating']], reader)

show the amount of users and items in the dataset.
```

dataset = data.build_full_trainset()
print(f'Number of users: {dataset.n_users} \n')
print(f'Number of items: {dataset.n_items}')
```

```
Number of users: 610

Number of items: 9724

Determine the best model

Lets determine the best model for the dataset. We'll start with a baseline GridSearchCV below.

In [15]:

```
param_grid = {
    #latent factors
    'n_factors': [50,100,150],
    #number of iterations
    'n_epochs': [10,20,30],
    #learning rate
    'lr_all': [0.002,0.005,0.01],
    #regularization
    'reg_all': [0.02,0.1,0.2]
}
```

In [16]:

```
gs = GridSearchCV(SVD, param_grid, measures=['rmse', 'mae'], cv=5, n_jobs=-1) gs.fit(data)

print(gs.best_score)
print(gs.best_params)
```

{'rmse': 0.8546994097820197, 'mae': 0.6556668851797411} {'rmse': {'n_factors': 150, 'n_epochs': 30, 'lr_all': 0.01, 'reg_all': 0.1}, 'mae': {'n_f actors': 150, 'n_epochs': 30, 'lr_all': 0.01, 'reg_all': 0.1}}
```

Cross Validation with KNNBasic

In [17]:

```
knn_basic = KNNBasic(sim_options={'names': 'cosine', 'user_based': True})

cv_knn_basic = cross_validate(knn_basic, data, n_jobs=-1)

for i in cv_knn_basic.items():
    print(i)

print()
print(np.mean(cv_knn_basic['test_rmse']))
```

```
('test_rmse', array([0.94394484, 0.94463601, 0.95621946, 0.95027554, 0.94757312]))
('test_mae', array([0.72180051, 0.72582941, 0.73271398, 0.72431223, 0.72735076])) ('fit_time', (0.15565752983093262, 0.11700725555419922, 0.12246465682983398, 0.1331083774 5666504, 0.1503736972808838)) ('test_time', (1.0733582973480225, 1.15631103515625, 1.008117437362671, 1.046880006790161
1, 1.1059303283691406))

0.9485297952972885

This cross validation score indidcates the model is evaluated on unseen data, which adds credibility.

In [18]:

```
knn_basic_pearson = KNNBasic(sim_options={'name':'pearson', 'user_based': True})

cv_knn_basic_pearson = cross_validate(knn_basic_pearson, data, n_jobs=-1)

```python
for i in cv_knn_basic_pearson.items():
    print(i)

print()
print(np.mean(cv_knn_basic_pearson['test_rmse']))
```

('test_rmse', array([0.97749589, 0.97607093, 0.97289199, 0.97244953, 0.96696339]))

We see an increase using pearson correlation, which indicates a veryh strong correlation between users in our recommendations system. This is finding a strong linear similarity between users perference

Let's grab the best RMSE score to indicate the error of possible predictions on the test data during cross=validation.

I'll also retrieve the best hyperparameters., splitting the dataset. This helps to find the best-performing model by tuning the hyperparameter evaluating its predictive accuracy on unseen data.

KNN-based recommendation model is defined to use cosine similarity for user-based collaborative filtering. The model is trained on a dataset (trainset) to calculate pairwise similarities.

Similarity Matrix: The computed similarity matrix (basic.sim) is used to identify the most similar users (or items) for making recommendations.

In [27]:

```
predictions = basic.test(testset)
```

In [28]:

```
print(accuracy.rmse(predictions))

0.97 indicates that the Basic KNN model is good.

In [29]:

```
basic_pearson = KNNBasic(sim_options={'name':'pearson', 'user_based': True}) basic_pearson.fit(trainset)
pearson_predictions = basic_pearson.test(testset)

```

```
Computing the pearson similarity matrix...

RMSE: 0.9739
0.9739095004566007

0.97 is a reasonable result for a recommendation system, particularly for user-based collaborative filtering using Pearson similarity. There can still be improvements to the model through KNNWithMeans model with Pearson similarity is performing reasonably well, but further improvements can be made.

KNNBaseline with Pearson similarity gives an RMSE of 0.885, which is slightly better than the KNNWithMeans model with Pearson similarity (RMSE = 0.904).

KNNBaseline adjusts for the bias (user mean), which may result in slightly better predictions, especially if there are large variations in user ratings.

The improvement from 0.904 to 0.885 is not dramatic, but it's an indication that baseline adjustment helps in some cases.

#Train the SVD model
model = SVD()
n_factors=150, n_epochs=30,lr_all=0.1, reg_all=0.1
model.fit(trainset)

#evaluate the model on the test set
predictions = model.test(testset)
rmse = accuracy.rmse(predictions)
print(f'RMSE: {rmse}')
```

```
RMSE: 0.8788
RMSE: 0.8787824693423378

For better performance, I used a model like SVD. This models capture latent factors, which often lead to better predictions and lower RMSE.

Lets create a function that will generate movie recommendations for a given user based on the model's predictions.

In [37]:

```python
Define a function to recommend top 5 movies for a given user
def recommend_top_n(user_id, n=5):
    # Get all movie IDs
    all_movie_ids = ratings_df['movieId'].unique()

    # Predict ratings for all movies the user hasn't rated yet user_rated_movies = ratings_df[ratings_df['userId'] == user_id]['movieId'].tolist() movies_to_predict = [movie_id for movie_id in all_movie_ids if movie_id not in user_rated_movies]

    predictions = [ (movie_id, model.predict(user_id, movie_id).est) for movie_id in movies_to_predict
    ]

    # Sort by predicted rating and select the top n
    top_n_movies = sorted(predictions, key=lambda x: x[1], reverse=True)[:n]

    return top_n_movies

Example: Get recommendations for user ID 1
user_id = ratings_df['userId'][0]
top_movies = recommend_top_n(user_id) print(f"Top {len(top_movies)} recommendations for User {user_id}:") for movie_id, predicted_rating in top_movies:
    print(f"Movie ID {movie_id}: Predicted Rating {predicted_rating:.2f}")
```

```
Top 5 recommendations for User 1:
Movie ID 109487: Predicted Rating 5.00
Movie ID 904: Predicted Rating 5.00
Movie ID 1199: Predicted Rating 5.00
Movie ID 1203: Predicted Rating 5.00
Movie ID 1259: Predicted Rating 5.00
```

The function provides the top rated movie within the dataset. For user 1

Hyperparameter tuning

Let's find the best RMSE score. This will be the lowest RMSE score obtained during grid seaerch across all combinations of hyperparameters.

In [38]:

```python
model2 = SVD(n_factors=best_params['n_factors'],
            n_epochs = best_params['n_epochs'],
            lr_all=best_params['lr_all'],
            reg_all=best_params['reg_all']) trainset2 = data.build_full_trainset()

model2.fit(trainset2)

#evakuate model 2
trainsets, testsets, = train_test_split(data, test_size=0.2)

model2.fit(trainsets) prediction = model2.test(testsets)

rmse = accuracy.rmse(prediction)

print(f'Model 2 RMSE: {rmse:.4f}')
```

```
RMSE: 0.8571
Model 2 RMSE: 0.8571

Since the RMSE score measures how well the predicted ratings match the actual ratings, the lower score indicates that there has been an improvement.

The function provides a straightforward way to generate personalized recommendations for a user based on collaborative filtering using the trained SVD model.

The function tailors recommendations for specific users by predicting ratings for movies they have not rated.

Although this provides recommendations for active users. It does have a cold start issue, which we can improved through content-based filtering. Let's import TfidVectorizer, and cosine_similarity libraries from sklearn.feautre_extraction.text and sklean.metrics.pairwise, respectively.

In [43]:

```python
#fill the missing values in movie_df with empty strings
movies_df['genre'] = movies_df['genres'].fillna('')

#Instatiate TfidVectorize, setting stop words to english
tfidf = TfidfVectorizer(stop_words='english')
#fit tfid
```

```python
tfidf_matrix = tfidf.fit_transform(movies_df['genres'])

#get the cosine similarity of the matrix
content_similarity = cosine_similarity(tfidf_matrix, tfidf_matrix)

#create a DF of the results
content_sim_df = pd.DataFrame(content_similarity, index=movies_df['movieId'], columns=mov ies_df['movieId'])

Create a function that returns similar movies to the one that have been rated
def get_similar_movies(movie_id, top_n=5):
    similar_movies = content_sim_df[movie_id].sort_values(ascending=False).head(top_n + 1) similar_movies = similar_movies.iloc[1:]  # Exclude the movie itself return movies_df[movies_df['movieId'].isin(similar_movies.index)][['movieId', 'title
', 'genres']]

Example usage
similar_movies = get_similar_movies(100, top_n=5)
print(similar_movies)
similar_movies
```

Out[43]:

Evaluation

In [45]:

```python
def evaluate_model(ratings_df, model):
    """
    Evaluate hybrid recommendation performance using RMSE.
    """
    #using list comprehension, we predict the userId and movieId on the ratings_df

    ]
    #Calculat the root mean squared error
    rmse = np.sqrt(mean_squared_error(ratings_df['rating'], test_predictions)) return rmse

rmse = evaluate_model(ratings_df, model2)
print(f"Hybrid Model RMSE: {rmse}")
```

```
Hybrid Model RMSE: 0.6721433404055687

A score of 0.67 suggests that, on average, the model's predicted ratings are off by 0.67 points.

Compared to the baseline model prediciton, the hybrid model reduces this error to 13.4% of the range. Representing a 28.7% improvement in prediction accuracy.

This indicates that the hybrid model significantly outperforms the baseline in terms of predictive accuracy.

Real-time recommendations

Let's test our model, by creating rela-time user input function. If the user is a current user, we will make recommendations based on their previouse rating history. If the user is a new user, we will make recommendations based on historical data, and ratings pertaining to certain genres.

In [49]:

```
Real-time input for recommendations

        print("\nIt looks like you're a new user! Please tell us your preferences.") genres = input("Enter your favorite genres (comma-separated, e.g., Action, Comed genres = [genre.strip() for genre in genres]

        # Filter movies by genres
        filtered_movies = movies_df[movies_df['genres'].apply(lambda x: any(genre in x f

Heatmap of User-Movie Ratings (Subset)

Movies

Next Steps

Implement additional evaluation metrics such as Precision and Recall, although this won't add much value as the matrices itself is sparse. We may want to test for more advanced recommendation models.

Improve diversity and Seredipity, introducing penalization methods for repetitive recommendations to ensure users received diverse movie suggestions.

Implement a feedback loop where users can rate recommendations or mark them as "not interested", allowing continuouse system improvement.

Conclusion

Using collaborative filtering approach implementing leveraging user-based or item-based similarities to recommend top 5 movies for each user. To address the cold start problem, a hybrid model combines collaborative filtering with content-based filtering, incorporating movie metadata.

To provide personalized movie recommendations, we consider their historical data or the historical data of others based on ratings for new users to ensure tailore recommendations.

The model's performance is assessed using Root Mean Squared Error (RMSE) to measure prediction accuracy. Additionally, due to the sparsity within the matrix, Precision and Recall are not used to evaluate the ranking effectiveness of the recommendations.

This project has significant implications for both businesses and consumers:

For Businesses:

- Enhances user retention and engagement by improving content discovery.
- Drives higher revenue through increased watch time and targeted content recommendations.
- Provides valuable insights into user preferences for strategic decision-making.

For Users:

- Saves time and effort in finding enjoyable movies.
- Improves overall satisfaction with streaming platforms.
- Encourages exploration of new genres and content.
